Big Game Falls To Guns Of Local Hunters.

One of the finest loads of big game seen in this district was brought into town Thursday when Bert Fisher, Frank Heselton, Jack Topley, Otto Mueller and Irwin Klein returned from a hunting trip to their old stamping ground at the headwaters of the Big Red Deer River.

They have five fine deer, all about 4 or 5 years old, with heads 4 point or more, all in splendid condition, and three moose. The members of the party estimated that the deer would weigh over 300 lbs. each.

Alex Moore, who accompanied the party, also got his full quota of the game.

Bill Moon, Riley Moon, Johnny Suderman, Det. Fulkerth, Bob McGaffin and Dave Walder, who went out to the Fallen Timber country two weeks ago in quest of big game, returned last Wednesday evening with a nice haul of three bull moose (two 2-year-old and one 3-year-old).

A. G. Studer, Cecil Adshead and Jack McCloy came in from their hunting trip west of the Bearberry after having had fair success. Game was not plentiful in that district but were successful in bagging one moose and one deer.

Alberta Brothers are "Grain Kings"

Two young Alberta brothers qualified as champion grain growers on Monday when they moved into the "King Row" at the International Grain and Hay Show in Chicago.

F. Rigby, 23, of Wembley, Alta., pushed all competition aside to win the coveted "wheat king" crown, and his younger brother, W. Justyn Rigby, 22, took a place alongside him as "oats king."

The "wheat king's" sample of grain of the Reward variety was outstanding. It weighed 67.5 lbs. to the bushel, and judges said the sample was one of the finest of red hard spring wheat they had ever seen.

In the last 19 years of wheat competition, Canadians have won 16 times. Young Rigby unseated Gordon Gibson of Ladner, B.C., the 1937 wheat king.

Never before in the history of the International Grain Show competition have brothers annexed the two crowns.

Both brothers operate with their father a 320-acre farm at Wembley in the Peace River district and gained experience in raising grain as members of the Canadian boys' and girls' farm clubs.

Honored at Bridal Shower

A largely attended miscellaneous shower was given at the Evangelical Church basement on Monday evening in honor of Miss Mary Newton, who is to be married shortly.

The bride-to-be was the recipient of numerous gifts, both beautiful and useful. The evening was spent in games and a delightful lunch was served.

Mrs. Jack Krueger was hostess at a miscellaneous shower at her home for Miss Mary Newton on Friday November 25th. About thirty-five friends and neighbors spent a very enjoyable afternoon. While games were being enjoyed, a little wagon prettily decorated was wheeled into the room by two of the little guests, Miss Newton, in her quiet pleasing manner, thanked her friends for their many useful gifts. At the close, the hostess served refreshments.

Neighbors and friends of Miss Dorothy Youngs, bride elect, honored her by a shower on Thursday last at the home of Mrs. Peter Johnston. The loaded basket was carried in by Anne Dupont and Jimmie Jackson, miniature bride and groom. Miss Youngs was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts. A purse of money was given towards silverware by some of the ladies. We extend to Dorothy hearty wishes for a happy future.

Agricultural Salvation

A few years ago a good deal was printed and heard in this country about the Danish co-operative movement and the system of rural education as practised in that little European country, the close tie which exists between Danish rural education and co-operation and the profound effect which this combination has exerted upon the economic and cultural life of the people of Denmark and particularly of the residents of the agricultural areas.

So much interest was evinced in the results of the tie-up between education and co-operation in Denmark that governmental authorities in this country a few years ago secured a great deal of data on the subject and this information was widely disseminated throughout the prairie provinces. In the course of a year or two farmers and others in this country became well posted on what has been and is being done in Denmark and the results on the welfare of the people of that country.

Generally speaking the information secured by the people of this country was favorably received by the farming community of Western Canada and while it was generally recognized the Danish systems of rural education and co-operative marketing of agricultural products could not be adopted in this country in toto, there were many who felt that some of the features of both could be made adaptable here, not only to the economic benefit of the agriculturist but also to the promotion of a better cultural life.

During the era of the great depression of the past eight or nine years the interest which had been aroused in this country in the two movements which have contributed so much to the material welfare and happiness of the Danish rural people appears to have dropped out of sight and that is to be regretted for there is much of value therein of which advantage might be taken in shaping the future course of the rural life of these prairies.

Undoubtedly this loss of interest can properly be attributed to the struggle which the farmers have had to wage during the past few years for their very existence. Agriculturists have had to wage warfare against a series of disasters of great magnitude, including drought, dust, rust and grasshoppers, forcing them to give undivided attention to intimate threats and problems and leaving them little opportunity or energy to prosecute researches further afield.

Should Consider Possibilities

With, it is to be hoped, a return to more nearly normal yields in 1939, the present might be an appropriate time to take stock of present day trends in Western Canadian agricultural industry in the hope of determining the course which should be shaped to ensure future development along sound and profitable lines.

It is to be expected that much thought will be given to this subject in the next year or two and while the problems of the present and future are under review some earnest consideration might well be given to the question of the application here of some of the Danish agricultural marketing policies and the Danish rural educational system which lies behind their co-operative system.

As pointed out in a recent article by A. Axelsen Drejer, Secretary to the Central Co-operative Committee of Denmark the co-operative movement occupies a prominent place in the world's general knowledge of Denmark and, as he further pointed out, the enormous growth in the production and marketing section of the movement in that country "is directly connected with the reorganization of farm production in the last quarter of the nineteenth century", when conditions made it necessary for the farmers of Denmark to turn their attention from cereal growing as the main basis of their industry to animal husbandry.

There is plenty of evidence to demonstrate that the agricultural and folk schools played a very important part in enabling the Danish farmers to face and successfully combat the debacle which threatened to overwhelm their industry and, what is of equal if not greater importance is the fact that these schools have made a tremendous contribution to the cultural welfare and happiness of the rural population of Denmark.

During the past thirty years about one-third of the agricultural youth of Denmark have taken courses at the agricultural schools and the folk high schools, the latter affording opportunities for adult education particularly designed for rural people and including in a wide cultural and practical curriculum some courses in agriculture.

When it is pointed out that there are approximately 60 of these folk high schools and some 22 agricultural schools catering to a rural population of about 1,400,000 it is not difficult to understand the profound influence these institutions have had and are having on the life of the people of the country districts.

Seeks Tax Exemption

C.B.C. Advances Claim That It Is Adjunct Of Crown

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in an assessment appeal heard in Toronto before Judge James Parker advanced the claim it is exempt from taxation on the ground it is an adjunct of the crown. Judge Parker reserved decision.

Counsel for the city of Toronto said only actual crown lands, not separately incorporated bodies such as the C.B.C. were exempt from taxation. The Canadian National Railways and other publicly-created bodies were taxed in Ontario.

John Jennings, appearing for C.B.C., said the tax exemption claim would be advanced right across Canada.

HEARTBURN KEPT HIM AWAKE

Afraid To Eat Square Meal

What a worry he must have been to his wife! No food agreed with him. Acid indigestion made him positively wretched. In this letter, his wife tells how he got welcome relief:

"My husband developed a wretched form of gastric acidity," she writes. "Meals were a misery to him. He often could not sleep for heartburn. Business kept him from home a great deal, but when he did get a spell at home, I gave him Kruschen Salts. I was amazed at the results. That weary look left his face, and his indigestion gradually disappeared. It is a treat to hear him say, 'I'm hungry.' It seems too good to be true."—(Mrs.) K.M.E.

The numerous salts in Kruschen help to promote a natural flow of the digestive and other vital juices of the body. Soon after you start on Kruschen, you will find that you are able to enjoy your food without distressing after-effects. And as you persevere with the "little daily dose," you will see that Kruschen brings glorious relief.

Larger School Units

Movement Is Being Carried On Vigorously In Alberta

Reports from the Department of Education at Edmonton indicate that the movement to establish large units for school administration is being carried on vigorously. Blocks of from 80 to 90 small districts are being united to form one large administrative area. So far 34 large units have been formed.

Considerable opposition has developed in many parts of the province to the big unit plan, largely based on the claims that school taxes will be increased and that local home rule will be eliminated. Proponents of the new system assert that rural education in its present setup is at a standstill and that further progress is impossible until the small administrative unit disappears.

Two generations ago education was the parents' responsibility. After a long struggle the community assumed the costs of the education of all children within its borders. Today it is being asserted that equal and adequate educational facilities can be provided only by enlarging the administrative areas to include a great number of communities.—Calgary Albertan.

Planning Reserve Force

Men To Be Trained By Royal Canadian Mounted Police

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police plans to train a number of reserves from among the staffs of large firms in several cities, it was announced at Ottawa by Deputy Commissioner Thomas Dann.

The reserves will not be trained at Regina or Ottawa where the force already has a large number of trained men available.

One city where the scheme will be tried will be Winnipeg where men chosen from employees of a number of large companies will be drilled. The usual strict R.C.M.P. entrance requirements in regard to physical condition, weight and height will not be rigidly enforced.

The men, when trained, will constitute a reserve supply for any emergency the force may be called upon to face.

Like To Obey

Women In New England Prefer Husbands Who Are Boss

The results of a test show that 59 per cent. of all American women object to the word "obey" in the marriage ceremony. But this is not the case in staid, Puritan old New England, where the condition is reversed and 55 per cent. of the women want husbands who will boss them around and make them mind. But, if a majority of American women object to obeying their husbands, the position is reversed when the male in the case is their boss. The survey shows 88 per cent. would rather work for a man than a woman.—Halifax Chronicle.

Department Of National Defence Studying Program For Manufacture Of Arms

This country's chief difficulty in the matter of equipping her defence forces arises from the fact that Canada entered the armament picture long after other countries had started. Those from whom it was formerly possible to purchase the ordinary routine needs of the Canadian defence forces are so completely occupied filling their own requirements that little, if any, attention can be paid to Canada.

In spite of increased appropriations for defence at the last two sessions of Parliament, little progress has been made in the way of rearmament.

Realization of this has prompted the authorities to give serious consideration to establishment in Canada of means by which, in most articles of heavy equipment, the country could be made independent of external sources of supply.

To this end reports have been collated setting forth the character and capacity of nearly 800 industrial plants. Against this, however, the government is faced with a growing sentiment throughout the country that the nation's defence needs should be supplied from plants that are government-owned, and from which the profit-motive has been eliminated.

Defence Minister Mackenzie testified before the Bren Gun Commission recently that while government ownership of armament production was the ideal system, it was not at present feasible. The government, he said, had never abandoned the policy; it had been only postponed. Financial stringency had dictated a temporary policy or private manufacture.

Within the Department itself two "schools of thought" obtain. The general staff, headed by Major General E. C. Ashton, contends that armament manufacture should be done in a dominion arsenal. The civil administration, directed by Major General L. R. LaFleche, Deputy Minister, concedes the propriety of government controlled production, but favors the temporary policy of private manufacture in order to overcome quickly the country's lack of equipment.

Huge capital outlays for buildings and machinery, years spent in the training of personnel in a range of work involving every sphere of heavy industry, and the necessity for considerable experimentation would delay production for a lengthy period, it was said. And in this period the defence forces would continue in their present state. The advocates of temporary private manufacture of arms urge the equipping of the defence forces from the presently existing sources, while, at the same time, creating as circumstances permit the structure necessary for government manufacture. The parliamentary votes of the last two years, each in the neighborhood of $35,000,000 were largely applied to the acquisition of airplanes and the construction of coastal defences.

But of the 175 planes contemplated in these programs less than half have so far been delivered, while the calibre of the guns installed in the coastal defences has been questioned in respect of their adequacy.

The amount of heavy artillery which Canada possesses is negligible. The medium and light artillery is all of war-time "vintage" and is all out-ranged by weapons with which other powers are now armed.

In anti-aircraft guns the same impoverishment exists, while Canada's equipment in respect of armored fighting vehicles amounts to only a couple of light tanks and a dozen Garden-Lloyd machine gun carriers.

Records Are Compared

Westerners Travel More Than People In The East

When Hon. C. D. Howe stepped off the plane at Regina airport after his visit to Lethbridge, he told reporters he doubted that, when the service becomes regular, one plane daily each way on Trans-Canada Airlines would be enough.

Then with, no doubt, in mind the disparity in population between East and West, he added the suggestion that what we in the West lack in numbers we make up in travel. Westerners travel more, he said.

And now he has the East "in his hair" as the saying goes.

Do Westerners really travel more than Easterners. If so, why?

With nearly 2,000 miles between us, as we write, and Toronto, we will say we agree with Mr. Howe. The writer confesses with some pride that he was born in Huron County, Ontario. A trip into the next county in our younger days was an event. It almost made us a travelled person. Lake Huron, beside which we were born, is only 130 miles from Toronto. Yet the travel between the city and the lake is meagre. Of course, Torontonians have a lake of their own at the front door, but the Bay is far from being as inviting a spot as the shores of Lake Huron.

Here in Lethbridge the 90-mile jaunt to Waterton National Park is made by Lethbridge people of an evening and they think nothing at all of it. But the average Ontario man would hesitate to drive 90 or 100 miles of an evening to get anywhere, except probably back to his own county.

In the West, of course, we have to travel more. Here we have ranches of 100,000 acres, yes, even 200,000 acres. It's a day's work to ride the line fence of one of these ranches. To visit a neighbor means probably a trip of 20 or 30 miles. Farm homes in many sections of the West are very often a mile apart. It was not out of the ordinary when the West was settling up for the farmer to haul his wheat 30 or 40 miles to the nearest railway, and cattle drives of five to 100 miles to ship the beef herd didn't bother the old-time cowboy in the least.

And then, too, here in Alberta we have the Rockies looming up 100 miles away. They look only 20 miles off on a fine clear morning, just a nice before-breakfast walk to a dyed-in-the-wool Westerner. Distance to us is merely a figure of speech. The real reason for this may be that practically all the older generation came thousands of miles to open up the West. They got the travel habit then, and because of the vast area of the prairies and the great distances they had to travel in the good old days, they keep right on travelling.

And so, in our opinion, Hon. Mr. Howe is right, Westerners do travel more.—Lethbridge Herald.

Valuable Holstein Cow

Greatest Producer Of Milk In North American History

Regasborne Alice Alcatraz, three-year-old Holstein-Friesian cow from the herd of Osborne Sager of Troy, Ont., was acclaimed greatest producer of milk in North American history by government officials and prominent dairymen of the United States and Canada.

While cameras clicked, Alice was toasted in Holstein milk before a gathering of 400 on the Sager farm, 12 miles west of Hamilton, by Mrs. H. C. Nixon, wife of Ontario's provincial secretary.

Dr. G. I. Christie, president of the Ontario Agricultural College, recalled that when Sager graduated from the college many years ago, the yearbook contained a reference to him: "We wish him luck chasing the elusive dollar with his favorite pet, the Holstein cow."

Triumph For Modern Science

Mechanical Throat Teaches Deaf And Blind Girl To Talk

A flaxen-haired child, both deaf and blind, placed chubby fingers against the vibrating sound box of a "mechanical throat," and then in carefully enunciated syllables repeated the message relayed through her finger tips: "Give me the apple."

That simple sentence so painfully uttered represented a triumph for modern science which two years ago began working on her case.

Back of it was the story of an unwanted foundling left on the doorstep of County Hospital in Chicago when five days old. For four years she lived in a world of darkness and unreasoning fear.

Scientists believe that the case of Joan Higgins may be as important to her generation as that of Helen Keller's was to hers.

Fear was Joan's chief emotion when she was taken to Dr. Robert H. Gault, Northwestern University psychology professor, two years ago.

Her clothing frightened her and she tore it off. Objects near by were there only to be destroyed.

For the first year under the care of Dr. Gault there was little change in her condition. Then her tutors noticed her attachment toward anything edible. She would cling tentatively to an apple, a cookie or a bone.

About this time also came development of the mechanical throat, which Dr. Gault calls a phonotactor, and which science regards as an outstanding contribution in educating the deaf.

The phonotactor was designed by Gault as the only means of communicating with Joan. The machine bears strong resemblance to a radio, having a "loudspeaker" which transmits the sound vibrations from the instructor's microphone. Joan "hears" by placing her face or fingers against the machine, and then attempts to imitate the vibrations with her own voice.

The first words she learned were "apple," "cookie" and "bone." Today that meagre vocabulary has progressed to nearly 80 words. "She is a bright child," Gault says, "and we have overcome all her fear."

A Different Matter

Workmen Did Not Stand Up Under Test Of Sincerity

A good commentary on the criticism of Neville Chamberlain's magnificent efforts to secure peace is contained in a true story heard by the London Daily Sketch from an architect. This architect is putting up a building in Central London. One day during the recent crisis, the workmen went en masse to the foreman and asked him to lead a procession to Whitehall. They intended to march there immediately carrying banners. "Support the Czechs at all costs." The foreman, an ex-service man, immediately agreed. "But on one condition," he added. "That is after our march we all go to Great Scotland Yard recruiting office and join the army at once." The march did not take place. Sheepishly the men resumed work.

Recalls Plane Flight

Wilbur Wright Gave First Woman Trip 30 Years Ago

Mrs. Edith Ogilvy Druce, a resident of the French capital, has been recalling her airplane flight 30 years ago—said to have been the first woman's airplane trip in history.

It was at Le Mans, France, and Mrs. Druce was then Mrs. Hart Berg. She went up with Wilbur Wright and stayed up exactly two minutes and 30 seconds.

The day of her first flight Wright had taken up several other passengers, including Hart Berg who was one of his backers and a prominent engineer. The aviator asked Mrs. Berg if she would like to go for a ride.

Though wearing a picture hat with a large ostrich plume and the flowing skirts of the period, she consented, but when the plane began to move her hat blew off, her skirts flew up and she clutched desperately at the "rod" and stopped the plane which, fortunately, had not yet left the ground.

They tied her hat on with a veil and a string around her skirts at the ankles—and she was off. "I wasn't a bit afraid," she said when she came down. "It was like a big ship sailing over waves of air."

Protected By Government

Enormous Elephants Are Safe In Area Of South Africa

For about 250 miles in the Outeniqua and Zitzikama country, in the Cape Province of the Union of South Africa, in the coast districts, the Knysna and Addo elephant herds are now under Government protection in their own preserves.

Elephants in the Knysna forests are said to be nearly twice as large as the Indian species, and about three times the size of their small relatives in the Addo Bush near Grahamstown, some 280 miles farther east.

Knysna elephants' ears are square, with only the corners rounded, and so enormous that when extended in excitement they sometimes measure as much as 15 feet across the forehead from tip to tip.

Australian Spy Service

Australia has an espionage service. It became necessary because of the decision of the British government to equip Australian defense service with a wide range of the latest war material developed in Great Britain. A Federal Investigation Service for running down leakage of confidential information has been created.

A documented story that Norsemen reached the Canadian mainland more than 400 years before Christopher Columbus landed on the West Indies in 1492, has been written by a northern Ontario publisher, J. W. Curran, of the Sault Ste. Marie Star.

The story is that Norsemen, probably in the 11th century, sailed from Greenland through the Hudson Straits into Hudson Bay and landed in the country inhabited only by Indians. Mr. Curran believes they travelled by river and lake to within a few miles of the head of Lake Superior, largest of the Great Lakes.

His proof is the finding of ancient Norse relics near the mining town of Beardmore in northwestern Ontario. James E. Dodd, a railway engineer and amateur prospector, claims to have found the weapons while digging his claims in 1931. He thought so little of the discovery, believing the fragments of axe and shield and a broken sword to be Indian relics, that he dumped the pieces in the cellar of his home.

Two years ago word of the discovery reached Dr. Charles T. Currelly, director of the Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto. Dr. Currelly established that the pieces were genuine Norse armor of the late 10th or early 11th century. He paid Dodd $500 for them.

But Dodd's word that he dug up the relics was disputed and it was contended in some quarters that the bits of armor may have been brought to this country from Norway. Mr. Curran, after lengthy investigation, announced he was convinced of the truth of Dodd's story. Dr. Currelly then said he, too, was satisfied that the discovery was genuine.

The Sault Ste. Marie publisher said he was confident that further exploration in the Beardmore area would reveal relics proving more Norse explorers than one died in Canada long before Columbus discovered America, as told in the world's histories and school-books for centuries. In his belief the Vikings were the first white men to visit North America. Mr. Curran has the support of Dr. Currelly and other archaeologists.

Sees Goal Achieved

Inventor Of Cellophane Welcomes Discovery Of New Finishing Agent

Although "Cellophane" is 30 years old, it was only last year that J. E. Brandenberger, the inventor of the process for making it, saw his original goal achieved. Spilling some wine on the table cloth of a Paris restaurant started the Swiss Chemist searching for some form of protection that would make tablecloths and other textile products stain-proof. His experiments, which resulted in the discovery of a method for making cellulose film, solved many problems, but not the one of rendering textiles stain-proof. The inventor's dream of a world of stain-proof tablecloths and dresses was made possible last year, however, with the discovery in England of a finishing agent that renders fabrics durably stain-proof and water-repellent.

President Roosevelt Speaks Of Services To The State

President Roosevelt in a message to the annual encampment of the Jewish war veterans of the United States:

"The American people need no reminder of the services which those of Jewish faith have rendered our nation. It has been a service with honor and distinction. History reveals that your people have played a great and commendable part in the defence of Americanism during the World War and prior wars, and have contributed much in time of peace toward the development and preservation of the glory and romance of our country and our democratic form of government."

The World of Wheat

By H. G. L. STRANGE

Director "Crop Testing Plan"

The Trade Treaties just signed by Great Britain, United States and Canada constitute a new policy of great importance to Canadian farmers.

The goods farmers buy will be slightly lowered in price. Cattlemen will have the opportunity of exporting annually about three million dollars' worth more of stock, and there will be a slightly increased export, too, of certain agricultural products other than wheat.

The six cent preference (that beneficial protection enjoyed by Canadian wheat) has been eliminated, but our farmers have cheerfully given it up, for now wheat growers can approach the Government, figuratively with clean economic hands, and say 'You have made a splendid start in lowering tariffs; carry on the good work. Lower the tariffs now again;
the goods of European countries so that foreign people can sell more of their goods and commodities to Canada, and so be enabled to purchase more of our wheat.'

I am forced myself to the conclusion that lower tariffs form the only practical means by which prairie farmers can sell that quantity of wheat which they must, I believe, produce each year in order to maintain their very economic existence.
Lower tariffs, too, would certainly promote the cause of world peace, and so would decrease the necessity for costly re-arming for war.

Following factors have tended to raise price: Indian crops need rain; consequent possibility of acreage reduction and considerable imports - Russian winter wheat unfavourable owing to ice formation and dry soil - Colder European weather expected to increase wheat consumption -
India again buys Australian wheat - Argentine corn quality only mediocre - Decrease in banana shipments to Jamaica.

Following factors have tended to lower price: India discontinues negotiations for Danubian wheat because of low quality - Persistent decline in value of British Pound Sterling - Six cent U.K. wheat preference repealed - Holland again raises import duties on cereals -
Increase in 1938 world rye crop -
Increase in wheat and barley production in Iraq.

Of interest to campers, fishermen and housewives, especially the latter, is an interesting booklet just released by the department of fisheries at Ottawa, entitled "100 Tempting Fish Recipes." The recipes are planned specifically for Canadian fish and have been tested by well-known home economists. Interesting chapters on the food value, vitamin content, and the way to buy fish are also included. Most popular recipes in this book for everyday use will be Canadian fish balls and creamed Canadian Finnan haddock. The recipe with the most competition in the title is Huggin' in Buff. How to make it is as follows:— Write the Department of Fisheries, Ottawa, for your free copy of the above booklet, which contains the recipe.

Of local interest is the following item clipped from a recent edition of the Edmonton Bulletin: Secretary-treasurer Norman Bowles, of the Innisfail Social Credit Association, walked out of the annual convention of the association in Innisfail last Saturday (19th Nov.) when the assembled delegates refused to hear his wife's explanation for electioneering against the Social Credit candidate in the recent Athabasca by-election. He refused to return to the meeting. Delegates passed a unanimous vote Westcott Literary Society held their annual meeting in the School last Friday evening and will produce six programs commencing December 16th. Officers elected were: Clifford Murphy, president; Maitland Perrin, vice president; and Marion Levagood, secretary-treasurer.

Westcott W.I. met with Mrs. W. Rennie on Thursday, November 24. Instead of a paper, a round table discussion of current events was held, which proved most interesting. Plans were made for the annual meeting to be held next month at home of Mrs. Webster. Following donations were made by the Institute: to Junior Red Cross $10; to Wood's Home $5 and to the Salvation Army $5. A contest provided the entertainment for the afternoon. All members are asked to bring suggestions for the 1939 program to the annual meeting.

Conducts Own Picket Line

There's a man in Ottawa with a grouch against a tire manufacturing company. He drove slowly through city streets in a solitary picket line. Across the rear of his automobile was spread a large banner bearing the caption: "A brand new — tire and tube blew out and wrecked my car."

The power in the jaws of alligators lies only in the closing motion. A man can easily hold them shut with his hands once the jaws are closed.

As time passes, erosion softens the outlines of mountains; young mountains, thus, are the roughest.

Technicians From Europe

Highly Skilled Craftsmen Are Coming To Canada

Canadian manufacturing industry is being enriched by highly skilled technical men fleeing from oppression in central Europe. It was learned from immigration officials at Ottawa. Hardly a week passes that provision is not made for such skilled technicians to enter Canada.

"It reminds one of the days of the French revolution when the flight of skilled cloth-makers from France to England was a Godsend to the industry in the United Kingdom," one official remarked.

These technical men do not qualify under the immigration laws which restrict immigration from central Europe to farmers with sufficient capital to set themselves up in this country, wives and children of men already located here and girls coming to Canada to be married.

When a firm finds out about a skilled man who would be valuable to it and who is anxious to leave a central European country, it applies to the immigration branch of the department of mines and resources. If the assurances given by the firm that he will have steady work here and will not displace Canadian labor are considered adequate, a special order-in-council is passed by the cabinet allowing the man into Canada. A special order has to be passed for each man.

Men regarded as top technicians in their particular lines will be giving their knowledge to Canadian industry. They are chiefly engineers and chemists.

Most of those seeking to enter Canada from other countries where their positions are in danger are of the professional class.

Many are lawyers but it is doubtful whether many lawyers will be admitted. To practice law in Canada one must be a British subject. That takes five years and is a practically prohibitive provision.

Egrets Protected By Law

One Fully-Plumed Bird Now At Miner Sanctuary

The snow egret, protected in Canada and the United States for many years, has begun to migrate to the swamps and marshes of southwestern Ontario. One fully plumed bird has made his headquarters the ponds around Jack Miner's bird sanctuary near Kingsville, most southerly town in the Dominion of Canada.

The snow egret is as spotlessly white as its name would indicate. Its graceful plumes, with their delicate feathers, hang over its back. For years egret plumes were worth their weight in gold for making hats for ladies of fashion. So valuable did their feathers become that hunters nearly wiped out the birds.

About 125 years ago the Audubon Society in the United States, realizing how near extermination the snow egret was, persuaded the federal government to enact legislation forbidding egret hunting. As a result the bird is actually on the increase.

Value Of Research

A Story Of Gladstone And The Electrical Gadget

To those who are sceptical of the value of research it is only necessary to repeat the story of Gladstone and Tyndall. Gladstone found time from his many administrative duties to attend a scientific lecture at which Tyndall illustrated a point by producing some electrical gadget. After the lecture, the Grand Old Man stopped to examine the gadget more closely.

"Very interesting," was his comment, "but of what use is it?"

"If we can develop it a little further, sir," was the reply, "one of these days you may be able to tax it."—Vancouver Province.

Cat Naps For Health

People who indulge in cat naps during the day are likely to live to a ripe old age, according to Dr. Stewart Curran, Vancouver Medical Health officer. "Cat naps during the day, even in meetings, are as helpful as good food," he told a meeting.

Federal Government Unable To Provide For A Loss Each Year

The difficulty of maintaining the minimum price has to be recognized. The Federal Government is in no position to go on providing $40,000,000 a year in doing so, and it is bound to give heed to the objections raised in the parts of the country where most of the voters live.

What is to be hoped for is that the world demand will improve to such an extent that the western growers will receive much more for their wheat through the ordinary channels of trade than they are now obtaining from the board. If, however, this does not happen, obviously it will be necessary to consider other methods than that now in effect of safeguarding their interests.

It is a serious mistake for them to assume that the policy adopted by the Government last summer will be a permanent one.—Edmonton Journal.

There Is A Difference

Between Patriotic Spies And Those Ready For Any Service

J. S. C., in the Vancouver Province, says Sir Basil Thompson discriminates between spies of the type of Lieut. Karl Hans Lody, who came to England on espionage work from patriotic motives and the "scum of neutral spies, who were ready to offer their services to either side."

Lieut. Lody, before his execution, sent a letter to the officer commanding the Wellington Barracks, thanking him "as a German officer" for "the kind and considerate treatment" he had been accorded. On the morning of his execution he said to Lord Athlumney, the assistant provost marshal, "I suppose you will not shake hands with a spy?" To which Lord Athlumney replied as he held out his hand: "No; but I will shake hands with a very brave man."

Here is a sample of the "other sort": A young Fleming had been engaged by the Belgians to pilot young Belgians over the frontier for the Belgian army. He proposed to a French agent to sell the secret to the Germans. The Frenchman said "I know of eight men who are crossing tonight."

"That is worth money," commented the Fleming. "Quick, let us take it to the Germans."

Convinced of the man's duplicity, the Frenchman planned a comedy to trap this traitor. "I am really a German agent; I can get you some big money," he confided to the Fleming.

The "special work" that was to bring the big money required that both men make a journey to England. Once on English soil the Fleming was arrested by Scotland Yard men.

Actually, the much vaunted German espionage system, counted for very little in the Great War. The simple, trustful English with their usual perfidy had them beaten at every turn.

What He Wanted Most

Special Kind Of Pencil Procured For Crown Prince Michael

There recently arrived in England a pencil drawing very carefully sketched out, on a very ordinary piece of paper apparently torn from a very ordinary writing pad. The drawing showed a pencil, with the clip and the nozzle and the milled top to turn the lead up—all meticulously shown in detail. It was drawn by Crown Prince Michael of Rumania. Prince Michael was recently given a splendid new cabin cruiser, made in England. He has 12 motorcars, one of them a racing model presented by the former President of Czechoslovakia, Dr. Benes. He has motorcycles, horses—everything that a young man could desire—except a pencil. Prince Michael sought a special kind of pencil; could not get it in Rumania. So he sent this drawing to the Rumanian Legation in London, and pressed them to help him. The Legation discovered the right thing; and sent it back to the Crown Prince by an early post.

Automobile Out Of Control Smashed Into Doctor's Porch

An automobile running out of control literally delivered its injured occupants into the hands of a doctor at Niagara Falls, N.Y. The machine smashed over a curb and struck the front porch of Dr. Edward H. Morgat's home in such a manner that it pinned the doorbell down so it rang continuously. Dr. Morgat treated two men in the car for cuts and bruises.

Restless Redwoods

Scientists at the University of California have decided that the "greatest migration of the world" was that of the California redwood trees. They have established that these "restless redwoods" were blown across the northern face of the earth for 70,000,000 years before they finally settled down in California.

Migration From Asia

Scientist Discovers Trace Of People Antedating The Eskimo

Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, Smithsonian Institution anthropologist, reported the discovery of remains of a race of people who antedated the Eskimo, Aleut, and Indian in the migration from Asia to the American continent thousands of years ago.

The veteran scientist, who has just completed 10 years of exploration during each summer in Alaska and the Aleutian islands, said the hitherto unknown race apparently was the stem from which many of the American Indian tribes evolved.

Last summer a large collection of bones, skulls, mummies, stone implements, cooking pots and other utensils were found on a trip through the islands, principally on the island of Umnak, one of the foggy and frozen Aleutians, Dr. Hrdlicka said.

He expressed the opinion they showed unmistakably that long before the Aleut race moved out of Asia the earlier people had been moving slowly eastward to what is now Alaska, Canada, the United States and South America.

They apparently started from Asia at least 2,000 years ago, he said, and succeeding generations eventually reached the southern part of North America.

Fortune In Stamps

Refugees From Central Europe Negotiating Sales In London

A representative of a famous firm of Bond-street philatelic auctioneers, reports that the troubles in Europe have led to a huge influx of stamps from Central Europe into London. "It would be no exaggeration," he told a Daily Sketch writer, "to say that the value of the stamps received already is about £100,000."

Apparently stamps, in some cases, have been the only portable asset of a refugee. One man got his collection to Holland and has been negotiating for its sale in London for about £10,000. In some cases a Flight Tax of 25 or 30 per cent. has to be paid. One of the most valuable collections in Austria is the Rothschild collection.

Enthusiasm over Britain's new Civil Air Guard has caused such a rush of would-be flyers that a shortage of light private airplanes has appeared. In one week 26,000 applied for instruction in flying.

Jack caught the meaning. His lips became colorless.

"See here," he argued. "I'm not trying to stop you from working the way you see fit. Why shouldn't the rule work both ways? I'm paying the bills on this experiment of mine. No matter whose idea is right, we'll share and share alike."

"Um - humph." McKenzie Joe rolled his tongue and stared far up the valley. "I knew another fellow like you once, Jack. He got an idea that he had to go after things on a grand scale. First thing he knew all his money was gone. And he had to sell out."

"That's idiotic."

"So's your idea," said Joe bluntly. Hammond's eyes snapped.

"You're only saying that because you've got a prejudice against anything that's modern or sensible. All you want to do is waste everybody's time, staggering around blindfolded!"

Heatedly he swung down the step then and headed for the village. McKenzie Joe stared after him, a not unkindly light in his troubled eyes.

"Now I know I'm goin' over to Whoopee and get drunk," he mused at last.

For that matter, Hammond knew it too, and the knowledge helped considerably to cool his anger as he pounded along the trail toward his placid claims. Getting drunk, with McKenzie Joe, was like a plague of locusts or a spring flood. Something disastrous always happened. At last, Jack turned from the trail and went into Jeanne's store for a tin of tobacco.

"You look worried," she said.

"I am. Joe has announced that he's going to get drunk Thursday night."

"Well," she laughed, "he'll have plenty of company." Jeanne was much more buoyant these days. Lew Snade had not come again to Sapphire. In fact, Kenning had told Jack that the man had purchased one of several newly imported canoes and gone down the lake, prospecting. Enough that he had departed. Jeanne went on. "You won't have to call out the reserves when Joe gets going?"

Jack remained serious.

"It's really pretty terrible, Jeanne. Cracked heads and all that."

"But you're going to be with him to see that he doesn't get hurt."

"I can't leave him—something always happens when I do."

Jeanne smiled.

"Maybe he'll fool you this time and be good."

"Here's hoping." Jack felt better now. Strangely, he always felt better after he had talked to Jeanne.

Towers. Yet he did not realize how often he needlessly dropped by this little store to buy tobacco when he had plenty, matches when his pockets were full, socks he did not intend to use.

A week before, she had insisted on paying the partners for the original supplies which they had furnished her, only to go deeper in debt.

It had been a secret loan from Jack Hammond for $3,000, to be rushed out by airplane the next day and sent by express to The Pas. At least, the monetary weight of her past was off her conscience. Now she came forward, wistfully eager.

"Gee, it's good to see you smile again," she said. Then hesitantly, "You've helped me so much. I'd give anything if I could—"

There she halted and turned away. Jack's eyes followed her gaze, to sight the trim form of the approaching Kay Joyce.

"Oh, there you are," the Seattle girl exclaimed, with her usual easy command of spontaneity. "I've been looking for you."

Jack Hammond felt again the queer emotions which flooded him whenever these women met. As though he should explain Jeanne, extol her good qualities. It made him angry with himself; Jeanne needed no extolling and Kay had never made an outright move of enmity.

"I was just on the way down to the creek," Jack said. "I heard some shouting."

"Yes, Olson's made another strike."

"Olson again?" Hammond turned to Jeanne. "Better put in a new order." Then to Kay: "Olson practically buys out the store after every new strike."

Kay covered her rejoinder with a disarming smile.

"I must learn how to handle these rich miners. You'll teach me some time, Miss Towers?"

Jack Hammond gasped. For Jeanne replied, with the same smiling pleasantness.

"Yes, we must exchange recipes."

"Oh, gorgeous," Kay Joyce was equally unctuous. Then, "Jack, can you walk down to the creek with me?"

Once away from the cabin: "You've simply got to help me out with this man Olson."

"With Olson? I thought he was after your mother."

"She's after him, you mean. It's sickening. Now I've been rung into it. He wants to give a big dinner to celebrate this strike."

"Well?"

"I simply can't sit through a party like that. You've got to get me out of it—tell him that we're going for an airplane ride, anything. It's to be Fourth of July night."

"What time?"

"Seven o'clock."

"Thanks for that! I was afraid it would be later. I've got to be away by ten. I've promised to be with McKenzie Joe. It's something I can't break. I simply can't. You'll let me go by ten?"

It was with a bit of pique that she said good-bye to him the night of Olson's party. Hammond almost ran from the cottage to his cabin. Joe already was dressing, a funeral procedure.

He pawed at the buttoning of his collar, stretching his neck dolefully as he strove to accustom it to its confines. He peered into the crinkly mirror and tied his blue tie with its red polka dots for a third and a fourth time. He took his old hat to the door and brushed it meticulously; he had forgotten to order a new one. He rubbed another dose of bear grease on his boots. He put on his electric blue coat, and gave a hitch to his electric blue trousers with their unpressed box wrinkles at the knees. Then he walked dolefully to the door.

"Ready?" he asked Jack.

There was quite a crowd in front of the dance hall when they arrived in Whoopee. At intervals a bomb hurtled from a mortar into the air and exploded with a detonation which threw itself from mountain peak to mountain peak in seemingly ceaseless echoes.

Around the World Annie, resplendent in a dress of star-spangled bunting, topped by a blue-and-white tricorn, trimmed with a red cockade, was vociferously greeting all comers.

"Liberty frightening th' world!" she shouted. "Ray for Whoopee!"

"Whoopie yourself!" shouted a miner.

"Took the words out of my mouth," answered Annie, with a merry little grin. "Whoopie for you. Whoopie for me. Whoopie for Alaska!"

After a time they went inside. An orchestra began to play, violin, clarinets, trombone, cornet and accordion, imported by air from Juneau.

As if from nowhere, girls appeared, slinking smilingly toward the incoming miners. One of them, Florine, arms half extended, as if for dancing, placed herself directly in the path of McKenzie Joe.

He did not evade her. He did not brush her aside. He merely put out a hand and with a mournful, shelving motion, moved her out of his way. Straight onward he went, to the bar, and while Jack strove vainly to restrain him, ordered Scotch.

Then, disdaining the whisky glass, he raised the bottle—a cork, in Canadian parlance—in a big hand.

For a long moment he eyed it. His beaverlike eyes circled under heavy brows. Then he raised the big bottle to his lips and allowed it to gurgle until Jack gasped, from the mere agony of watching.

CHAPTER VIII.

An hour later, Jack Hammond searched the crowded dance hall in vain. All in a moment, he had lost McKenzie Joe, and this was a bad time to lose him.

Evidences of McKenzie's activities, however, were glaringly present. A window stood gaping at the graying dusk; darkness did not come now until after midnight. A bottle had broken the pane and Joe had thrown it, as a grand finale for the fireworks exhibit. There also were broken chairs, crushed to bits by McKenzie's tremendously strong hands, to the cheers of the mob. Joe had not joined in the enthusiasm—even that of Around the World Annie, who was charging 100 per cent. profit on all breakage. True, he had lost some of his funeral air and his lips bore a hint of a smile, like a polar bear.

That is, the smile had been there when Jack last had seen him, with his hat on sideways, his electric blue suit badly dishevelled, and his course in life a vague, wandering one, in which he sometimes walked flat into a wall without realizing it—until he bumped his nose. Then, solemnly, he would turn, blankly survey his surroundings, and begin another aimless excursion.

It had been during one of these sorties that Jack had lost his partner. One moment Joe had been steering straight for the middle of the dance floor, only suddenly to disappear as a surging mass of legflinging miners and their girls cut him off from the pursuing Hammond. By the time Jack had fought his way through the tangled mob, McKenzie Joe was gone. Now the younger partner sought him in vain, at last going to the gambling hall.

Here the crowd was even thicker. Throngs were jammed around the rails of the crap games; the clatter of the dice was continuous with the drone of the keeper.

Spaced at intervals were the intricate intricacies of faro, each game with its dealer, laconically fingering the cards from their wooden box, its frozen faced lookout, high on his long-legged stool, his green eye shade and his dead cigar each drooping at a similar angle, its never restful case-keeper, with his counting board, recording the cards as they came forth.

Here too was the glitter of the "big wheels," glaring with a maze of electric lamps, charged by the pride of Around the World Annie's establishment—a gasoline motor light plant, which had formed an entire load for Timmy Moon's plane. The stud games also were busy, slot machines, the blackjack games and the enthralling click of the ivory ball as it rounded the roulette wheel. Hammond turned in that direction. He had sighted Bruce Kenning.

He was careless, his collar loosened. Slightly drunk, he stood sweating at the board, his left hand incessantly riffling the pile of chips before him, his right stabbing outward, to place his bets, a four-way wager here, a straight bet there, a hedge on the Double O. A look of surprise came into Hammond's eyes as he neared the man; there was terrific concentration about him, an air of obliviousness to everything save the lay-down board and the dizzy spin of the multi-colored wheel.

Gave Him An Idea

Alfred Martinelli has had the change of his name to Martin made legal. He told the Circuit Court judge: "I was running a little art shop in Philadelphia. My name was on a sign hanging out front. I hadn't made a dime in three months. One day a storm blew rain and dust and dirt on the sign. The last four letters of the name were blotted out. Business started picking right up."

One discovery made by stratosphere flights is that the air at such heights, although much rarer than that near the ground, contains about the same percentage of oxygen.

The importance of salt as a medium of exchange was mentioned by Marco Polo in his report on the financial system of the Mongolian emperors in his time.

Simply Follow These Easy Directions to Ease the Pain and Discomfort and Sore Throat Accompanying Colds.

1. To ease pain and discomfort and reduce fever take 2 "Aspirin" Tablets—drink a glass of water. Repeat in 2 hours.

2. If throat is raw from cold, crush and dissolve 3 "Aspirin" Tablets in 1/2 glass of water... gargle.

It's the way thousands know to get almost immediate relief. Make sure you get "Aspirin" Tablets.

The simple way pictured above often brings amazingly fast relief from discomfort and sore throat accompanying colds.

Try it. Then—see your doctor. He probably will tell you to continue with "Aspirin" because it acts so fast to relieve discomforts of a cold. And to reduce fever.

This simple way, backed by scientific authority, has largely supplanted the use of strong medicines in easing cold symptoms. Perhaps the easiest, most effective way yet discovered.
